An aerial photograph of a town, likely in Hungary, with several red location pins placed at various points across the urban area. The pins are scattered throughout the town, from the northern part down to the southern part, and from the western side towards the eastern side. The town is situated near a large body of water, possibly a lake or a reservoir, which is visible in the lower-left quadrant of the image. The surrounding area appears to be a mix of urban development and open land.
